A Day of Tea and Fashion at The Hermitage to celebrate Mother's Day
Honoring the trailblazing women of the Ladies' Hermitage Association

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (April 16, 2019) – Andrew Jackson's Hermitage is inviting the public to spend Saturday, May 11, in the historic gardens of Tulip Grove mansion for a "Women of The Hermitage" fashion show, tea and hors d'oeuvres.

The Ladies' Hermitage Association, now the Andrew Jackson Foundation, is celebrating the 130th anniversary of becoming one of the first historic preservation organizations founded by women. To honor its legacy, guests will be escorted into the historic gardens for a fashion show featuring more than 20 period dresses and clothing styles worn by the women of The Hermitage across two centuries. The models will share stories from women of The Hermitage.

Following the fashion show, guests will be treated to a formal tea with hors d'oeuvres served in the 19th century parlors of Tulip Grove, home to the president's niece and acting first lady, Emily Donelson.

The morning tea will begin at 11 a.m., and the afternoon tea will begin at 3 p.m. Each program will last no more than two hours. Join in the celebration by dressing in the style of a favorite decade or by wearing a favorite hat.

More ticketing information can be found here at www.thehermitage.com/events/.

About Andrew Jackson's Hermitage

Andrew Jackson's Hermitage: Home of the People's President is one of the largest, most well-preserved and most visited presidential homes in the United States. Opened to the public in 1889, The Hermitage is one of America's first presidential museums. Today, The Hermitage is a 1,120-acre National Historic Landmark with more than 20 historic buildings, including Jackson's mansion and tomb, restored slave cabins, a church and gardens. In recent years, new interpretive initiatives and educational programs such as the history of slavery have enhanced the experience of nearly 230,000 annual visitors.
